RIVERSIDE FARM

RAHWAY, N. J.

January, 1938

Friends and Patrons:

Another season has passed and now you will be looking forward and making plans for your garden the coming season. Perhaps you did not plant Riverside Farm Seeds in your garden last season, if not now is a good time to order Riverside Farm Seeds and make a good start. You will make no mistake by planting the Selected Varieties listed in this little catalog as they have all been tested and proved, as among the very best of their kind.

I believe you are interested in Quality varieties, whether vegetable or flowers and through my many years experience in growing these crops I feel that I am able to supply these varieties in seeds that will prove to your entire satisfaction.

The past season many people seeing the crops being grown for seed were amazed at the high grade and selection being made and the expression, "HARD TO BEAT" was often heard. Well that about sizes up the situation. There may be other seeds just as good, but NONE ARE BETTER.

I want to prove the value of Riverside Farm Seeds in your garden this season. I will appreciate an order if only for a single packet, and I can assure you of my personal attention in filling your order with as good seeds, bulbs and plants as may be had anywhere at any price.

I want to thank my old customers for past favors, many of them having sent me the names of their friends who use seeds to send a copy of my catalogue. I appreciate this very much as I often obtain a new customer for Riverside Farm Seeds. With best wishes for the season, I am

Very respectfully

TOMATOES

BREWERS FAVORITE TOMATO EARLY, PRODUCTIVE, FINE QUALITY

See front cover illustration of cluster, photographed at the stage of growth when just starting to ripen. This cluster at the time weighed two and one-half pounds, which shows the great solidity of the fruits.

The vines are vigorous in growth, and productive of good sized fruits, which are the most solid and best quality of any tomato in the early or medium early class. The fruits ripen up fine and hold up in size, throughout the season. It is a good keeper the flesh never becoming mealy as do some varieties when ripe. Its fine quality makes it a grand tomato for the home garden, and as has been demonstrated the past season owing to its fine flavor Brewer's Favorite Tomato has no superior in the making of tomato juice. From all reports received I feel sure that tomato growers for early market will do well to try Brewer's Favorite, alongside any other early variety. I have the entire stock of this tomato, the seed being saved from the best fruits and can only be obtained at Riverside Farm, at the following price, as long as my supply holds out. If you have not grown Brewer's Favorite Tomato start this season, either for the home garden or growing for market.

THE RUTGERS TOMATO

SECOND EARLY, MAIN CROP VARIETY

My stock of the Rutgers Tomato is fine, seed is saved from selected fruits. There is no better, and if you want to grow a crop of fine tomatoes plant Riverside Farm seeds of the Rutgers Tomato this season. Will supply only as long as stock lasts.

Vines are of stocky vigorous growth, and with an abundance of foliage protecting the fruits from the hot sun. Fruits uniform, very smooth, of good size and very solid, with small seed cavities, Flesh bright red, thick and of very good quality, being much superior to the Marglobe. For canning and tomato juice purposes the Rutgers Tomato owing to its rich, red color, and fine flavor will give satisfaction. Classed as a second early in ripening it will be found a valuable variety for the home garden or growing for marketing.

Another seasons trial convinces me that the Rutgers Tomato will withstand more wet weather conditions without cracking than any other tomato that I know of and produce a heavy yield, where most other varieties would sustain a heavy loss.

I do not hesitate to recommend my stock of the Rutgers Tomato to all growers who want to try this variety. Give it a trial. $\frac{1}{4}$ Oz. 20c; Oz. 50c; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. \$1.75.
